

THE WORLDS OF THE MERCURY MEN

MERCURY - THE FIRST WORLD

Birthplace of the first race of men, Mercury (also known as the "Forge of Apollo") is inhabited by beings made of pure light so dense that it has formed mass.

VENUS - THE FORGOTTEN WORLD

Destroyed by a cataclysmic event centuries ago, less than a dozen Venusians are alive today, scattered across the solar system. Also known as "Author of Orphans."

EARTH - OCEANUS

MARS - THE IMMINENT WORLD

Mistaken as a "dead" planet, Mars is in fact a world waiting to be made. The creation event has yet to bring life to the "Canvas of Elohim."

JUPITER - THE UNKNOWN WORLD

Jupiter's gravity is so powerful that it drastically transforms the geography of its 63 moons overnight, scattering vast mountain ranges in a few short hours. This makes exploration nearly impossible, justifying the planet's ancient name: "The Pioneer's Plague."

SATURN - GOD OF TITAN

Nearly all of the planet's population inhabit Saturn's sixth moon, Titan, which was the first alien world visited by League explorers during the event known as The Saturn Accords.

URANUS - THE MAGNETIC SKY

With its incredibly dense magnetosphere, the population of Uranus use ancient metalurgy techniques to inhabit the skies of this gaseous planet.

PLUTO - THE CAPTURED WORLD

Also known as "Cosmos Tomb," this tiny uninhabited planet is believed to have been hurled from a distant galaxy and captured into orbit around the Sun. Pluto's surface is littered with ancient artifacts of an alien race.

NEPTUNE - LAIR OF BOREAS

The population of this ice giant survive violent weather conditions and intolerably cold temperatures which plummet to -366°F (-221°C) on the planet's surface.
